Residents of the Peace will have the opportunity to attend a CKUA concert that will later be broadcast over the radio station's airwaves. On Saturday, Sept. 8, two musical groups from Alberta, (singer/songwriter Cori Brewster and Bluegrass trio Down to the Wood) will be performing at Beaverlodge's South Peace Centennial Museum.

The concert is part of the CKUA Live from Alberta Stages program and will be hosted by Andy Donnelly, host of the Friday Night Celtic show.

Cori Brewster is a singer/songwriter from Canmore whose latest album is called "Large Bird Leaving."

"She's a really great performer," said Donnelly. "I think the audience can expect a nice, intimate performance."

"Down to the Wood are bluegrass wizards," added Donnelly. "They're three journeymen musicians. People will be amazed by them; they're just great."

Other small communities around the province receiving concerts include Fort Macleod, Rosebud, Cochrane and Edson.

"Small concerts are really the fabric of arts in Alberta," said Donnelly. "This is a new project
